NAME SUCCESSOR
TO SCHWARZKOPF*Question Up in New Jersey
Senate This Afternoon*PERSONAL APPOINTMENT*Considerable Opposition Said
To Exist to Hoffman's
Choice

(By International News Service)

TRENTON, N. J., June 2—A bitter battle was expected to take place in New Jersey's Senate Chambers today, when the question of confirming Governor Harold Hoffman's appointment of Colonel Mark O. Kimberling as superintendent of State Police to succeed Colonel H. Norman Schwarzkopf, comes up.

Fulfilling a prediction often made in the days immediately preceding the execution of Bruno Richard Hauptmann for the murder of the Lindbergh baby, the Governor sent Kimberling's appointment to the Senate for confirmation late last night.

The Governor's appointment of Kimberling, his personal friend and principal keeper of the New Jersey State Prison, was made against the wishes of leaders of the Governor and prominent individuals and organizations that Schwarzkopf be retained.

Considerable opposition to the Governor's plan was certain in the Senate, but political leaders expressed the belief that Hoffman commands a majority to confirm the appointment. Colonel Schwarzkopf's term expires Sunday.

Recital of Tracy Pupils Is Very Well Attended

Original specialty numbers, coupled with brilliant costumes, resulted in a most pleasant evening for residents of Bristol and surrounding communities, last evening, when pupils of Miss Winifred Tracy gave a program of musical numbers and dances, in Mutual Aid Hall, Wood street.

A capacity audience was generous with applause, and the well-executed numbers elicited pleasing comments. All were high in their praise of the manner in which the students performed. The pupils, from the youngest to those of more advanced years, showed confidence and skill, and did their intricate steps with grace.

Miss Tracy presented original numbers, and the presentation of "In a Flower Garden" captivated the audience. The Spanish number; the Bookshelf Review, and the solo work interested all.

Funseekers' Class Has Party at Bair Residence

The Funseekers Sunday School class of the Presbyterian Church, taught by Miss Dorothy Bair, held a meeting last evening at the home of Miss Anna Keers, Trenton avenue and Jackson street. Business was followed by a social time and refreshments.

Those attending: Misses Doris Bair, Doris Stewart, Anita Zug, Evelyn Streeter, Dorothy Coombs, Amelia Leeper, Anna Keers.

Hoffman To Speak

Philadelphia, June 2—Governor Harold Hoffman, of New Jersey tonight was to address the Eleventh Annual Convention of the Pennsylvania Association of Township Commissioners. Two hundred delegates at the three-day session here, today were opposing any attempt to transfer the relief burden from the state to towns and local government, and also voiced opposition against state gasoline tax on fuel used by municipalities.

OPERATED ON

Arthur Leigh, Tullytown, was operated on Sunday evening for appendicitis in Dr. Wagner's hospital.

CANAL COMPANY'S ACTION
MOST EAGERLY AWAITED*Act Whereby Portion Was Returned to State,
Unconstitutional*TO GIVE STATEMENT

It is expected that the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company may surrender the tract of land involved with receipt of official notification of the Supreme Court's decision that the act by which the company returned the portion of the canal to the State of Pennsylvania, is unconstitutional. The company, which wishes to ascertain full meaning of the decision, has notified the Delaware Valley Protective Association that the canal company will present a statement within a few days.

The canal company's representative has assured Moses J. Coyle, president of the Delaware Valley Protective Association, of the sympathy held with the objectives of the protective association.

A petition is being circulated in New Hope, to be forwarded by Dr. C. L. Taylor, Doylestown, County Health Officer, to Dr. Edith MacBride-Dexter, Secretary of Health for the Commonwealth. This petition accompanied by a report of an inspection by Dr. Taylor on the unsanitary condition of the canal in the village is expected to result in the State sanitation department sending an engineer to decide just what the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company will be required to do to immediately do away with the health menace.

A meeting of the officers and directors of the Delaware Valley Protective Association will be held on Thursday at which time President Coyle and Secretary Taylor expect to have some reports of the canal company's and the State's conduct regarding the canal's restoration.

It is expected of the State officials that their promise to insist on the canal being promptly restored to a navigable condition will be made good, also that all bridges be repaired—both public and private—and that the company fulfill all obligations stipulated in the old act of the State Legislature by which the canal company again has possession of the entire canal.

Failure on the part of the canal company to fulfill any or all of these obligations according to this act as interpreted by the present Attorney General will automatically result in the State's ownership of the entire canal. This naturally would include the section above Raubsville, which is now almost fully restored by the canal company.

The canal company is now handling the "hot potato," Secretary Taylor pointed out. Repair cost has been estimated at $200,000. This cost, added to a yearly maintenance cost of $30,000, which the canal company found too much of a burden five years ago is expected to cause the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company to relinquish title to the State of the entire canal.

Should the State acquire the entire canal, the Delaware Valley Protective Association has been assured of some gifts of land adjacent to the river to aid in the development of what will be one of the finest canal and river-view parks in the world.

THE NEW DEAL AND THE HOUSEKEEPER*EXTENSION OF REMARKSOF HON. WARREN R. AUSTIN
OF VERMONTIN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES
Thursday, March 26 (legislative day of Monday, Feb. 24), 1936

ARTICLE BY SAMUEL CROWTHER

MR. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the Appendix of the RECORD an article by Samuel Crowther entitled "The New Deal and the Housekeeper," published in the Saturday Evening Post of the issue of March 21, 1936.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Saturday Evening Post of Mar. 21, 1936]
THE NEW DEAL AND THE HOUSEKEEPER
(By Samuel Crowther)

Do you know that the New Deal and the extravagance it promotes in State and local governments have forced expenditures to a point where you can no longer pay for your government as you go—that about one-half of the sums paid out are from borrowed money?

2. Do you know that the spending of the New Deal is piling up immense debts and that eventually the money borrowed will have to be paid out of additional taxes?

3. Do you know that women own 80 percent of the life-insurance policies, 65 percent of the savings deposits, 44 percent of the public-utility stocks, 48 percent of the railroad securities, and 40 percent of the real estate?

4. Do you know that women contribute each year $80,000,000 in taxes on life insurance, $83,000,000 in inheritance taxes, and $2,000,000,000 in real-estate taxes?

5. Do you know that there are about 200,000 Federal, State, and local taxing bodies, all lying in wait for your dollar?

6. Do you know that in 1913 only $1 out of every $15.50 you earned went for taxes; that in the depths of the depression in 1932 $1 out of every $5 went for taxes; and that under the New Deal $1 out of every $4 is being taxed from you?

7. Do you know that the unseen dollar a week you pay out of every $4 of income will, at the present rate, soon be $1.50?

8. Do you know that the Nation is spending almost $15,000,000,000 a year for government and that the total income of those with incomes of $5,000 a year and over was only $5,707,071,000 in 1932, and is not much more now?

9. Do you know that $5,700,000,000 of income cannot pay $15,000,000,000 of Government expense, and hence at least two-thirds of the cost must be borne by those whose incomes are less than $5,000 a year—many of whom think they pay no taxes?

10. Do you know that if all incomes over $5,000 a year were taxed 100 percent and the proceeds distributed the result would be only $9.77 per person?

11. Do you know that the oldest political game in the world is concealing who actually pays the taxes by pretending that the rich pay them?

12. Do you know that those who directly pay taxes contribute only a relatively small part of the cost of government and that the big contribution is by those who think they pay no taxes?

13. Do you know that taxes, no matter who writes the checks, can come only out of what is produced? Taxes are not collected from land, for instance, but from what the land produces in the way of rent or crops.

14. Do you know that soaking the big corporations is soaking the wage earners in those corporations? Do you know that a corporation is only a pipe-line arrangement for bringing together capital, goods, and labor, and that present taxes exceed profits, and hence are levied on goods and wages?

15. Do you know that wages make up, on the average, about 85 percent of the cost of production, and thus taxes crush the buying power of wages?

16. Do you know that in nearly every purchase you pay (1) a corporate-income tax, (2) an excess-profits tax, (3) a capital-stock tax, (4) a gasoline tax, (5) a manufacturers' excise tax, (6) a per-

DOYLESTOWN, June 2—Pleading guilty to two charges of forgery committed on his own mother, Edward R. Worthington, 43, of Philadelphia, was sentenced at noon yesterday by Judge Calvin S. Boyer to a term of two and one-half to five years in the Bucks County Prison on one charge and sentence was suspended on the other.

Both Judge Boyer and Judge Hiram H. Keller heard the testimony in the case. Judge Boyer warned Worthington that he could not apply for parole until the entire loss was repaid to his mother, as well as the costs. If the money is not repaid, Worthington will be brought in and sentenced on the second charge, which will carry a penitentiary sentence, Judge Boyer told him.

Worthington testified that he forged one check for $50 and another for $40, at the Doylestown National Bank, using the name of his mother, Mrs. Jesse W. Worthington, of Wycombe. One check was forged on May 9, this year, and another on April 20.

Howard M. Barnes, vice-president of the Doylestown National Bank, was called as a witness for the Commonwealth.

Worthington also admitted that he had forged ten checks on his mother altogether, aggregating $665. He also stated that he had served ten months on an adultery charge and three months on a forgery charge.

Chickens Stolen From The Rectory of St. Charles' Church

Not satisfied with engaging in one of the meanest kinds of thievery, those who have recently been stealing chickens in Bensalem Township went a step lower early yesterday morning and stole the chickens from the coops of St. Charles Rectory, Cornwells Heights. They took 50 Rhode Island reds from the rectory property.

One hundred chickens were reported stolen from the property of Benjamin Salmon, Station avenue, Cornwells Heights. This robbery also occurred early yesterday morning. There were 90 Leghorns and 10 Rhode Island reds in the lot.

It is reported that numerous others have had chickens stolen in the Bensalem section and the authorities are anxious to learn of any robberies that have been committed.

Those who have suffered losses are requested to report them at once to Bucks County Detective Anthony Russo, at Bristol.

NEW JERSEY COURT
DECIDES MUNRO CASE*Awards Diamond Brooch And

TRENTON, June 2—A decision has been handed down by Judge Turp in Mercer Orphans Court in the several months' dispute over possession of a $700 eight-diamond brooch and a $200 grandfather's clock, left in the estate of the late Mrs. Grace Munro, widow of a former vice-president of the Superior Zinc Corporation of Bristol, Pa.

The decision is in favor of Mrs. Grace Pluta, 344 Hillcrest avenue, one of three daughters, and the possessor of the two pieces.

Counselor Henry Hartman, as executor for the estate, sought to have the diamond-studded pin and the clock turned over to the estate for equal distribution of the proceeds to the daughters, Mrs. Munro, Mrs. Ruth Holmes and Mrs. Henrietta Morgan, both of 872 Parkside avenue. Mrs. Pluta, represented by Frank J. Backes, contended, however, that the pin and clock had been given to her by her mother, who lived at her home four months prior to her death in October, 1932, after moving from a Greenwood avenue residence where she had lived with her daughter, Mrs. Holmes.

Joseph Pluta, of Ohio avenue, a brother of Mrs. Pluta's husband, testified that he helped move the late Mrs. Munro's furniture and belongings from the Greenwood avenue home to Hillcrest avenue, and asserted that at the time the Holmes family refused to let the clock be taken. He said that Mrs. Munro, when informed that the clock was not among her belongings, sent him back to demand the timepiece, which he said he did.

Mrs. Holmes testified that "be-

Gaynor-Taylor Triumph In "Small Town Girl"

The star of the immortal "Seventh Heaven," Janet Gaynor, and the sensation of "Magnificent Obsession," Robert Taylor, have joined hands to bring to the screen one of the most stirring modern romances in their latest picture, "Small Town Girl," playing at the Grand Theatre Monday.

Miss Gaynor was never more lovely in her successful career than she is in the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production. For the first time, she is allowed to dress up—and in this she reveals a new Janet Gaynor.

Taken from Ben Ames Williams' famous novel, brought to the screen by John Lee Mahin and Edith Fitzgerald, the plot of "Small Town Girl" concerns a country girl who marries a handsome doctor while he is intoxicated.

Her efforts to win his affection after she has fallen in love with him, bring tears and laughs alike from the audience.

Search For Body

Camden, N. J., June 2—Police and volunteers today were searching for the body of C. Leonard Brehm, Republican leader, who forfeited his life to save those of his wife and son, when their motor boat upset in the Delaware River below Delair.

Grasping life preservers, Brehm fastened them around the woman and his son, Leonard, Jr., 12, and then endeavored to keep the motor boat afloat by pumping.

Thomas Kaugman, a Camden policeman, and his wife, and Edward Cooke, were other members of the party saved after the launch struck a submerged rock.

To Electrocute Zeid

Trenton, N. J., June 2—His last hope gone, Charles Zeid, Philadelphia gangster, today prepared to pay the supreme penalty for the murder of a Camden, N. J., detective in a disorderly house in that city, September 2, 1934. Zeid, who won a thirty day reprieve on March 31, two hours before he was to die in the electric chair, was scheduled to be electrocuted tonight at the State Prison here. Despite affidavits presented by his attorney, John A. Penn, Zeid's plea for clemency was denied by the Court.

Scoring all their tallies in the first three cantoes, the Bath Road Men's Club won their engagement with the American Legion nine, 8-7, last night on Leedom's field. However, as the Road Club used ineligible players the Legion was awarded the game on a forfeit.

Bill McGahan and Hystie Grimes did the hurling for the Legion boys while Hughes tossed them up for the Bath Road Club. Hughes allowed but five hits while the winners made a total of eleven off the combined hurling of the two Legion twirlers.

The defeat of the Roaders dropped them into a deadlock with the Tullytown team for the cellar occupancy.

An Example Must Be Set*URGE FOR 'EASY MONEY'*Protection of Community In-

Says Judge

DOYLESTOWN, June 2—Declaring that the protection of the community is involved in their sentence, President Judge Hiram H. Keller, speaking to Sevelton Wilcox, 17, Quakertown, R. D.; Richard Skees, 20, Richland township leather factory worker, and Wilford W. Keller, Quakertown candy store clerk, all of whom pleaded guilty to stealing chickens, before sentencing them, said:

"The offense of chicken stealing is regarded as very serious by the Court. First, because it so often provides the only source of living for some people; and secondly, it deprives the farmers of their livelihood.

"The desire to make money and raise 'easy money' quickly is one reason why you are here. There are too many young men of your age coming before the Court. The Court cannot understand how many young men are able to drive their automobiles day and night and visit roadhouses on the money they earn.

"My natural inclination would be to grant the request of your counsel—that of not sending the young men to an institution—but your punishment must serve as a warning to others. Because you are so young and the Court does not like to send young men to prison, you will be saved—as well as your family—the stigma of imprisonment by being sent to a school."

Wilcox and Skees, formally charged with felonious entry, larceny and receiving stolen goods, which involved the theft of hundreds of chickens, were committed to Huntingdon Reformatory. Sentence was suspended on six bills.

Keller, who was involved in only one of the chicken stealing escapades, according to the Court, was entitled to a little different consideration.

"The Court knew your mother and knows that she died when you were a baby but that you have a good step-mother and father and one of the redeeming features for you is the manner in which your teacher and friends spoke of your character."

Keller was placed on probation until he is 21 years old, with County Probation Officer Russo and Jesse Cressman in charge.

Judge Calvin S. Boyer placed Frank Wilcox, 15, who is alleged to have been involved in six of the chicken stealing raids, on probation for two years with County Probation Officer Russo and Jesse Cressman in charge.

To Erect High Wire Fence Around School Building

Stanford K. Runyan, chairman of the Property Committee of the Bristol School Board, announces that the Board has decided to place a new fence around the high school grounds. This is to be a mesh fence seven feet high, with barb-wire strung along the top. The fence has become necessary to protect the high school buildings. Hardly a week passes that windows are not broken, and there have been times when 30 or 40 panes have been broken over the week-end. Quite frequently the building has been broken into and money stolen.

The school board is compelled to act for the protection of the property. After the fence has been erected, the gates will be closed after school each day, and no one will be allowed on the school grounds. It is Mr. Runyan's intention to use a part of the old fence to enclose the front and side of the school building at the intersection of Garfield street and Wilson avenue, so that when the work is completed, the school buildings will be entirely enclosed.

ENORMITIES OF DUST

Since it began to gather upon our growing world, dust has never received such anxious attention as we are giving it today—as much in physics, chemistry, meteorology and medicine as in agriculture and housekeeping. Dust, decidedly, is in the air.

Having submitted to its depredations and listened to sermons about its ultimate victory for ages, man seems at last to be aroused to try to do something about it, in scientific ways. Woman has always recognized the demonic power of dust—she has seen it devour a major part of her life with its maddening daily demands, its taunting return overnight, and she had to admit that no cunning device yet perfected can banish this microscopic horror of housekeeping. Vacuum cleaners helped; air conditioning, when available for the little home, will help much more, but is yet beyond the purse of many.

Were all the hours counted, centuries have gone to dust in the mere endeavor to keep dwellings neat. Outside, it carries off farms, tarnishes skyscrapers and changes maps; it leads a million foes inside of us. Perhaps man will be obliged to relinquish his other wars before he can assemble adequate funds and weapons for this ancient one that rages on every front.

Of late the larger museums have been arranging dust exhibitions. Dust effects grow popular in photography. Dust storms are classified by material and color. The dust of the atmosphere, the stratosphere and of starry space has been studied by astronomers, aviators, balloonists and machines investigating on their own. A Baltimore physician announces that the air is sterile above 20,000 feet, yet Colonel Lindbergh swept even Arctic heights with a "dust hook" and bagged bacteria and pollen. Here and abroad several monographs on dust have appeared from the pens of scientists who, like old-fashioned housewives, have devoted their days to dust.

CONFIDENCE SELLS GOODS

The seller must show confidence in his goods. If you are looking for a job, and appear doubtful whether you can do the work of some position, the employer will not hire you. But if you act as if you were confident that you can do it, your chances are greatly increased.

It is so in selling goods. The seller must appear to believe in his goods. One reason why advertised goods sell better, is that advertising gives the impression that the seller has faith in them.

Common sense tells people that the seller would not dare spend money on advertising, unless it had been thoroughly demonstrated that the goods are what they are claimed to be.

Misery loves company, but it doesn't get much: It makes the mistake of thinking company loves misery.

The Musings of A Native Son---

A Weekly Commentary on Things of Local Interest which will appear each Tuesday in this column.

After reading the article on baseball published in this column last week, a young man said to me, "It must have been interesting to have lived in those early days, when baseball was passing through its many changes, before reaching its final development, in the great game we have today."

His remarks set me to thinking and I concluded, that we older men fall, perhaps, to appreciate the experiences through which we have passed, in the greatest period of the world's history. And then came a flood of memories, in which the highlights in my baseball experiences during the last 60 years, stood out in bold relief.

First I thought of a tragedy that occurred when I was a small boy. A baseball diamond occupied a lot where the Bath street public school building now stands, and on an afternoon in May, 1874, some young men were engaged in a game of ball. A batter struck at the ball and missing, the bat slipped from his hands and flying over to the side line, struck a young man named Charley Michener in the throat, killing him instantly. The late Jacob Winder, who in later years was manager of the Bristol baseball team, was standing alongside of Michener, and escaped injury by a miracle. Michener was the son of a prominent merchant and his death was a shock to the whole town. I believe he had a sister who is still living.

Next week I shall write of another remembrance of the baseball of long ago.

The annual banquet of the service clubs of Burlington and Bristol, was held in Burlington one evening last week. As I sat at the table and enjoyed the good fellowship that prevailed, I could not help but think of the great changes that have taken place in the social relations between the two towns, during the past 50 or 60 years. Enmity and hatred characterized the old relationships. In the winter time when the river was frozen over, the young men from the two towns would meet half way across, and drawing a line upon the ice, would dare each other to cross. The challenge generally resulted in a free for all fight. Jerseymen were called Spaniards in derision.

Then came the era of secret benevolent societies and the frequent visits of the fraternity brothers, back and forth across the river. Fire companies became popular and the parades brought the members of the two towns together in social fellowship. Baseball was passing through its great evolution and players from Burlington combined with local players, to defeat the old Keystone Club of Bristol.

These three influences soon developed a feeling of cordiality and good fellowship, and the old animosities began to disappear. As the years have passed those old hatreds and enmities have become only a dream, for old timers to recall and talk about. The opening of the bridge five years ago, brought the towns into closer contact, and the service clubs on both sides of the river, are to be congratulated for doing their part in preserving cordial and friendly relations between the inhabitants.

The sudden death of Mrs. David O. Taylor, secretary of the Bristol Public School Board, came as a shock to her many friends. She was a very capable woman and performed her duties as secretary in a most efficient manner. As a member of the school committee, she visited the schools often, and in consequence, enjoyed a close friendship with the teachers and scholars. She was very conscientious in the performance of her duties, as was indicated by her reports made to the board each month. Her minutes were full and complete and models of neatness and accuracy. She will be greatly missed and the vacancy caused by her death will be hard to fill.

As I looked at the parade on Memorial Day and noted the small number that participated, I thought with a degree of sadness, what changes the passing years are bringing to pass, and how prone we are today to forget the promise we made when the boys marched to war, that "America would not forget."

My boyhood was spent during those years immediately following the close of the Civil War. Memorial Day celebration was then the greatest of the whole year. Secret societies and fire companies turned out in the parade with the G. A. R. Platforms were erected in several graveyards, from which special services were held. But last Saturday morning, the participation of about 10 members who represented the Sons of Veterans, was all that reminded us of those "Boys in Blue" who fought so valiantly to preserve the unity of the Nation from 1861-5.

When the first contingent left Bristol to participate in the World's War, a large crowd gathered at the Bristol Depot to see them off. Enthusiasm ran high and the boys boarded the train cheered with the thought that they enjoyed the love and respect of the townspeople, and that no matter what happened, they would not be forgotten. When the boys came home a big celebration was arranged for their honor, and subsequently, a monument was erected in remembrance of those who paid the supreme sacrifice.

In the Memorial Day parade were the Bugle Corps, a firing squad, in uniform, and a handful of comrades of the American Legion. Yes, times have changed. Sports, pleasures, picnics have taken the place of old time loyalty and appreciation. The duty we owe to the memory of those who fought, bled and in many instances died, that our liberties might be preserved, that the unity of the Nation might be maintained, and that the world might be saved from the selfish designs of a scheming monarch, has apparently been forgotten. Surely the time is ripe for introspection.

"BLIND TO LOVE" by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

SYNOPSIS

Young and beautiful Mary Shannon, secretary in the A. A. Heeley Steamship Company, is broken-hearted when socially prominent "Jamie" Todd, Jr., becomes engaged to Nesta Grainger, one of his own set. To add to Mary's sorrow, her Aunt Willie, brooding over a prank her co-workers played on her, commits suicide. Then Mr. Shannon loses his position. Wealthy Aunt Mammie comes to the rescue with an offer to set the family up on a chicken farm in Petaluma. Mary's parents move but she remains in Oakland because of her work. She lives at Mrs. Henry's boarding house with a friend, Margot Patterson. Edwin Samson, Mary's new manager, who took Stephen Bennet's place when the latter was put in charge of the Seattle office, disapproves of his wife's friendship for Mary, fearing Mrs. Samson will meet other men through her. However, it is Mary who meets several men through Mrs. Samson, nicknamed "Lalla." Margot warns Mary against being too chummy with Mrs. Samson and her friends, Jackson Carter and Al Pankhurst. Mary wishes she could meet the "right" boy, especially now when her heart still aches for "Jamie." She goes to the theatre with the new boarder, Milton Holden, wealthy but middle-aged insurance broker. Next day, at work, Ethelyn Piper, who is enamoured of her chief, asks Mary to explain her sudden interest in older men, adding that Mary was insulted when she told her Stephen Bennet cared for Mary and "he was well under thirty." To retaliate, Mary says, "Mr. Bennet is just like your chief—he's not the type to marry his stenographer. Milton Holden would marry me in a minute."

CHAPTER XVII

They passed a window of fur coats, stopped automatically, stared at them.

"He didn't give you the fur coat, did he?" Ethelyn smiled, and before Mary could answer, she said, "Oh, that's just a bad joke. I just hadn't seen it before, that's all."

"Oh, you've seen it. It's Margot Patterson's. She lent it to me. I have to look nice when I go out with a fellow like Milton Holden—the places he takes me to, and all. But if you want to know, he's going to get me a mink one for a wedding present."

She hadn't meant to say that. It slipped out. It was Ethelyn's fault, making so light of the whole thing, acting as if Holden were an uncle.

She could feel her face getting red. Suppose, some how or other, it got back to Holden? "Ethelyn, I didn't mean to say that. You won't say anything? Ethelyn, will you promise?"

"Of course. But my dear, what news! I'm going to be the first to give a shower for you. I think it's such fun when a girl announces her engagement."

"Ethelyn, I HAVEN'T! I may never. I don't even know if I—"

"Oh, he's just proposed and you haven't made up your mind! I see! Well, of course, it all depends—I barely met him—"

"Ethelyn, PROMISE!"

"Ethelyn, of course, I promise!"

But the day was spoilt. She was irritable and tired when she finally closed her desk, and started for home.

She was so late that there would be barely time to wash her face and hands before dinner. Timmy Weeks and the Frick girls, and one of the Painter boys were in the drawing room already, waiting for the dining room doors to open.

Timmy Weeks said, "Oh, a Mr. Carter telephoned twice for you, Miss Shannon. Said he'd try to call again."

She stopped short. "Did he say where I could get him?"

Timmy put another record on the phonograph. "Dance?"

"No thanks. Didn't Mr. Carter leave a number? It might be important."

"Come on, Peggy—YOU won't turn me down! Atta girl!—No, I asked him for the number, Miss Shannon, but he said he didn't know where he'd be. Too bad!"

She hurried up the stairs.

Miss Mary!

It was Holden. The last person she wanted to see. Her face flamed at the very sound of his voice.

"Hello, Mr. Holden," she called back, and then before he could say another word she darted up the stairs to the third floor, flinging over her shoulder, "Sorry, I can't stop to talk—I'm LATE!"

The room was empty, but Mar-got's green wool dress was flung on the couch, and her tan oxfords and mesh hose were on the floor beside it.

Mary went to the open closet, saw that the fur coat and Margot's new black dinner dress were gone.

She had a childish desire to cry. The dinner bell was ringing now. She thought, "I don't want any dinner. I'll just stay here. I don't want to see Holden again—"

She washed her face and hands, felt a little better.

After all, there was no reason for her to sulk in the room because Margot had a dinner date some-where. She went down the stairs slowly.

She heard heavy footsteps behind her, but she did not turn back and all through the meal she could feel

They walked on up to the corner, crossed the street.

"What was it you wanted to talk about?"

"Oh! It was just that I—that I feared—Mary, you seemed so cold tonight. I was afraid that I had done something to offend you. You were so different last night. To-night I waited an hour for you to come home, and then you came, and spoke to me so coldly—"

"I wasn't cold, I was just tired. I'm still tired. I can't help it. I'm sorry."

"Oh, it's nothing—nothing. Just that I—Mary, I'm a funny man. I'm not like most fellows. I—"

"Then it's all right. Here's my store! I want to go in here!"

"Oh!"

She was so exasperated she

"Could I get you a little gift then?" asked Milton. "A bottle of perfume—Druggist, is this a good kind?"

Holden's dejected gaze upon her, didn't know whether to laugh or cry. He stood there, like a wounded elephant, right in the way.

"I came out to buy some aspirin. I have a headache, have you forgotten?"

Instantly he was a new man, all sympathy, and assurance.

"My poor child! I didn't dream. I thought—I took it for an excuse. I—we must go right in. . . . Hm. A box of the best aspirin, please!"

"Just one of the little boxes," Mary put in crisply.

The clerk placed the small box on the counter.

"Anything else?"

"Yes, a package of bobby pins—dark—and a small package of soap chips."

The druggist wrapped the package. Mr. Holden cleared his throat, took a five-dollar bill out of his wallet.

Mary put a dollar on the counter. "You certainly don't expect to pay for my things!"

"Oh, I just thought . . . Could I get you a little gift then? A bottle of this perfume—Druggist, is this a good kind? Do you like that kind, Mary?"

"No, I—"

"Very lovely, sir. It is called—let me see—I think the English is Blue Night. No, Blue Love. And we also have some very nice—"

"Unless you want it for yourself, the sale is off. I wouldn't THINK of letting you get me anything!"

"But it would give me such—ah—such pleasure!" he said, when they were out of the store, walking back toward the house.

"Sorry, I'm independent, I guess. I like to pay for my own things."

"I know. I admire you for it. But someday there will be someone who—"

"You mean, some day I'll get married?"

"Yes, some lucky man will take care of you—"

"Maybe. Not for a good many years, I hope."

Seeds for cultivating Dollars

AS YOU turn the pages of this newspaper, dozens of seeds are scattered over your mind. . . . That's a good-looking car. . . . I'd like to have that radio. . . . What a pretty dress . . . I think I'll try a can of that soup. Some of these advertisements may not interest you at the moment. Others will fall on fertile ground, take root and bear fruit in some wise future purchase.

Speaking of seeds reminds us: Have you bought yours for the garden yet? It isn't too early to plant some of them now. How about the slip covers for the porch chairs? Then there's that new spring hat. And the special soap-sales for your spring cleaning. Look up these items in the advertisements before you buy.

Advertisements help you to weed out waste, both in your time and your money. They draw a straight line between your cash and the correct counter. Cultivate the habit of reading them regularly. They bring you a harvest of much usable information.

Mrs. Asay is a graduate of Bristol high school, and Philadelphia Business School. Mr. Asay is a graduate of Bordentown high school and Rider College, Trenton, N. J.

Pigmy Elephants Are With Huge Circus

With one hundred double-length railroad cars, bearing 1600 people, African pigmy elephants, African ponies, seven herds of full-sized elephants, 1009 menagerie animals and 700 horses, the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Combined Circus will arrive in Trenton, N. J., Wednesday, June 3rd, for afternoon and night exhibitions.

The circus is especially elated this season over the amazing success of the Big Show's sensational new super-feature—the first herd of African pigmy elephants (tiny tuskers that years ago attained their full growth) ever to leave the depths of darkest Africa, and the first herd of African elephants ever to set foot in America. The weird midget pachyderms are accompanied by a herd of miniature African ponies, world's smallest beasts of burden. These new importations have taken America by storm.

The Big Show's big top, seating 16,000 persons, covers seven rings and stages, a huge hippodrome track and encircling grandstands, and is one of 31 great tents, among them the menagerie, sheltering the world's largest traveling zoo. In its center this season will be seen Col. Tim McCoy's Indian Village, with Sioux and Black-foot warriors encamped. Col. McCoy, the screen's most outstanding western star, will himself lead his congress of rough riders of the world in the main performances and in the wild west.

The Greatest Show on Earth offers scores of foreign features this year, including the Naittos, the Royal Bokaras, the Imperial Viennese, an assemblage of 60 free-running horses, ponies and elephants; the largest aerial ballet ever produced. Fresh from Europe are the Walkmirs, the Antaleks, the Buemrangs, the Romeros, the Maschinos, the Robertos, the Willos, the Torrence-Victorios, the Roomeys, aerial novelty sensations. The Loyal Repenskis, the Rieffenachs, the Walters, famous bareback riding troupes; the two Guice aerial comedy troupes on the lofty bars; the two renowned Wallenda troupes of high wire thrillers; the Otaris, who fly in mass somersaults from an aerial cross; the Flying Concellos, with Antoinette, only girl to accomplish a two-hand-and-a-half mid-air somersault to a hand-to-hand catch; the Flying Comets; Dorothy Herbert, madcap rider of reitless jumping horses over fire burn-

HOW NEW DEAL IS FORCING IMPORTS ON FARMER

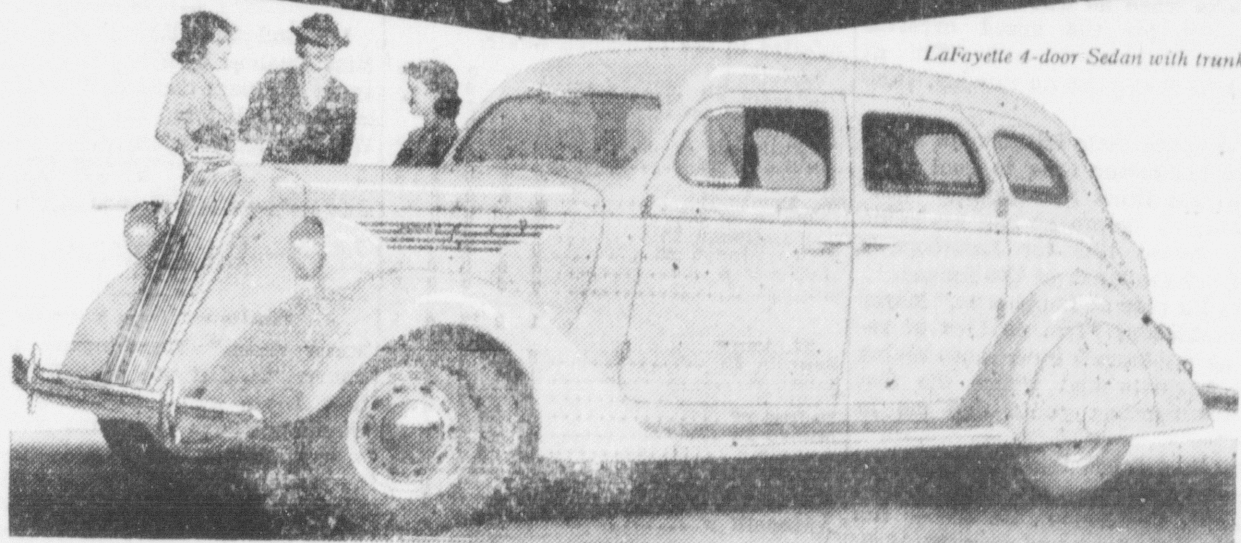

THIS PICTOGRAPH shows how the American farmer is being overwhelmed with imports of foreign corn, which could be grown in the United States. The New Deal failure to obtain prosperity through a planned scarcity, has changed the United States from an EXPORTER of farm products to an IMPORTER of them.

In 1932 we exported 7,886,000 bushels of corn; 150,000 barrels of corn meal and flour; and 11,895,000 pounds of hominy and corn grits. In 1932 we imported only 344,000 bushels of corn.

In 1935, under the New Deal, we imported 43,242,000 bushels of corn, and did not export a pound of corn, corn meal, flour, hominy nor corn grits. Thus millions have been lost to the American farmer, which is now being pocketed by the farmers of foreign countries.
